New Principal at Susa Creek School

For immediate release – July 13, 2016

Northland School Division No.61 (NSD) is pleased to announce the appointment of Taras Danco as Principal of Susa Creek School. Taras has been with NSD for the past four years educating students at Little Buffalo School. During his tenure in Little Buffalo, Danco assisted the school with implementing literacy improvement strategies, flexible programs to meet the needs of students and has taken training so students can learn about Lego robotics, photography and archery. Taras says he has heard great things about the Susa Creek community and believes his experience and abilities will help students succeed.

“I would describe my educational philosophy as being student-centred,” said Danco. “The best interests of the child should always be in mind. To this end, emphasis should be placed on developing positive relationships with students, parents, and the community. These relationships enable educators to effectively challenge students in order to promote growth. It is also important to have the expectation that every student is capable of reaching their best. I am looking forward to meeting everyone and working hard for the students at Susa Creek School.”

Mr. Danco’s education career started in 2009 at the Mary Butterworth School in Edmonton where he provided behaviour and learning assistance. Following his first year in Edmonton, he continued to hone his craft in Milk River, Victoria B.C., Ipswich United Kingdom and Little Buffalo School starting in 2012. Danco has a Bachelor of Education with Distinction from the University of Alberta and is working to complete a Masters of Education from the University of Calgary. His interests include traveling, reading, outdoor pursuits, fitness and music.
